Upland dump to be tapped as gas source

By ANDREA ADELSON
Staff Writer

Upland's once troublesome landfill may be a bargain in disguise.

After closing the city dump in August of 1979, when rainfall run off and methane gas became an environmental threat, Upland complied with regulators' clean up requirements at considerable cost.

Now, the same troublesome byproduct that was found in soil under nearby homes and offended the nostrils of residents bordering the dump, is being tapped as a possible moneymaker.

A private City of Commerce energy concern plans to capture Upland's landfill gas and use it to fire an electrical generator on the site by 1984. The electricity will be fed into a nearby Southern California Edison substation.

The city will earn an 8 percent royalty on Edison's payments to the City of Commerce firm, Assistant City Manager Mike Matlock said. The rate Edison would pay for the electricity was not disclosed.

Preliminary guesses put the landfill's gas capacity at 300 kilowatts over a 15 year life expectancy. Its value will increase with every jump in energy costs, pushing the cost of generating electricity ever higher.

Upland's landfill methane recovery scheme will be one of a handful in operation throughout the state, according to Hal Stemmler, a League of California Cities spokesman.

In Southern California alone, five other sites have contracted with Edison to buy their methane-generated electricity, ranging from 7.1 megawatts in Carson to 250 kilowatts from Irwindale.

Duarte's landfill began operation last month.

"Energy conservation is no longer pie-in-the sky," said Davis Councilwoman Sandy Motley, chair of the league's energy committee.

"It's no longer considered far-out technology. Cities have to save money every way we can. Some cities are paying as much as 10 percent of their budget on utilities," she said.

Cities are using the recovered gas for varied purposes, such as fueling city fleets or heating city buildings.

Cash-poor Upland sees the landfill as having dual benefits: making money and taking care of venting gas that has annoyed residents.

"We had fairly good control" of leaking gas, Matlock said. "We were able to catch it in time before we had any horror stories," like exploding gas reported in Denver basements.

Upland's waste methane gas is bubbling up from 500,000 tons of decomposing garbage, the collective waste of 20 years buried beneath the 35-acre dump on Campus Avenue between 14th and 15th Streets.

It is dissipated through 39 vents on the landfill's periphery, opened for two hours daily.

Nearly dead-center amidst the large, empty expanse is a tiny fence housing a vacuum pump, installed this week. Extending from the equipment like the fingers of a hand are five white plastic pipes. Their ends furrow beneath the landfill cap, 35 to 45 foot-deep wells collecting the combustible vapor.

The volume of gas and its purity will be determined during tests underway this month.

While testing has just commenced, Frank P. Wong, of Central Plants, is confident the plan will work on the site, the proposed home of future ball parks.

"This field is still in its infancy, although the technology is mature," Wong said.

Central Plants, a subsidiary of the giant Pacific Lighting Corp., parent company of Southern California Gas Co., has been managing commercial engineering equipment for 19 years, Wong said.

Central Plants has already invested tens of thousands of dollars in the Upland project, and expects to spend hundreds more, Wong said, declining to specify the amount.

Irwindale and Oxnard landfills are also being developed by Central Plants.

Waste methane's impurities lower its heating capacity to about half that of naturally occurring methane gas, more commonly known as natural gas.

About 11,000 BTUs (British Thermal Units) are needed to generate a single kilowatt of electricity, enough for the average home. A cubic foot of natural gas generates only one-eleventh of that needed for a kilowatt, about 1,000 BTUs.

Alternative energy sources, including wind, synthetic fuels, solar, cogeneration and bio-mass systems such as landfill methane, presently provide California with about 14 percent of the state's 36,284 megawatts of electrical capacity, reports the state Energy Commission.

By 2002, the commission projects one quarter of the state's electrical needs will be generated from other than traditional gas and coal-fired sources.

Upland schools will get a la carte lunch

By NANCY WALLACE
Staff Writer

The Upland School District board of trustees approved expanding the district's new a la carte lunch program to all 11 USD schools at its regular meeting last week.

The program was begun in October at Baldy View, Citrus and Magnolia elementary schools and at Pioneer and Upland junior high schools.

Prior to the a la carte program, Upland students had to buy a complete Type A hot lunch for a hot main dish.

Assistant Superintendent of Instruction Loren Sanchez said that the sale of Type A lunches did not decrease during the trial period, so district officials reason students were not substituting a la carte items for the complete Type A lunches.

Students receiving financial aid must continue to buy the complete lunches, Sanchez said, but can now supplement with extra ala carte items if they desire.

The new program is not resulting in substantial profits, he added, but is "holding its own."

In other action, the board elected its 1983 officers, selecting Rick Minnis and Donna Vandersall as president and vice president, respectively, for another year. Mike Varela will serve as clerk of the board, and as the district's representative to the city's recreation committee.

The board also accepted a report on damage resulting from last week's windstorm; the storm knocked down a total of 23 trees, ironically the same number planted the year before.

College board denies supervisors a raise

By NANCY WALLACE
Staff Writer

Trustees for the Chaffey Community College District denied the college's 15 classified supervisors and managers a 6.5 percent salary hike for 1982-83 and a one-time 4 percent bonus for 1981-82 last week, noting that no raises can be granted until the district is on better financial ground.

This action came despite a plea by Sharon Beets, job placement director, speaking on behalf of the college's classified managers.

Beets noted that while faculty members received a 2 percent bonus plus a 2 percent cost-of-living adjustment, and while administrators received a 4 percent bonus for fiscal 1981-82, classified managers were granted no such bonuses.

"We see it as a question of parity and equality," Beets said. "We are the one group that has received nothing." She questioned the group's standing as part of the college's "management team."

The group in question includes such posts as Data Processing Manager, Chief of Security, Maintenance Supervisor and Operations Supervisor, jobs requiring supervision responsibilities comparable to that of administration members.

"It is time that our classified supervisors be recognized as part of the management team," Board President Sandra Garner said. "Any salary discussion must be deferred until we get a handle on what our financial situation is...but we do see you as part of the management team." The trustees did grant the managers 20 days vacation time, the same flat rate as administrators. However, six of the managers have already earned 20 days vacation time, having served at the campus 10 years.

In other action, the trustees adopted a policy for the hiring and compensation of "adjunct" faculty, those part-time instructors paid hourly instead of on a pro-rata contract basis, which met with repeated objection by the Chaffey College Teachers Assoc. representative.

Phil Hartley, speaking for the CCTA, complained that too many hourly faculty already teach at the campus, and that the new policy would result in still more hourly faculty being hired. Hourly faculty, he said, are not required to keep office hours for conferences with students or for work with their instructional department.

The hiring of more hourly faculty, Hartley reasoned, would thereby "vicitimize" the students, the full-time faculty and, ultimately, the college.

Under the new policy, adjunct faculty would be assigned to those teaching posts "of a temporary nature" that require .53 percent less time than a full-time faculty post.

At present, most of Chaffey's part-time instructors in daytime classes serve on a pro rata contract basis, receiving a portion of a full-time contracted instructors' salary. Those in evening classes are paid by the hour, are not part of the bargaining unit, and are assigned fewer out-of-classroom responsibilities.

Salvation Army strives to help in tough times

By MATT COKER
Staff Writer

Times are tough for low-income families and, with the Christmas season approaching, thoughts of children having a dismal holiday are on the minds of many parents.

Luckily, those in the West Valley who are in this predicament have friendly people who will help in any way they can to brighten up their family's Christmas.

Top among those is the Salvation Army.

Ontario's Salvation Army, 1112 S. Euclid Ave., received applications for assistance for Christmas before Thanksgiving.

But like other agencies involved in donating during these economically troubled times, the task is not easy. More people need help and less people are willing, or able, to donate.

"We don't know what Christmas will be like," corps officer Capt. George A. White said. "We had to ask more from the United Way because we are receiving less."

They asked for $4,000, but the United Way only contributed better than $1,000. Additional sources came through with funds, and the group now is short about $1,000. But even if the the $4,000 mark is reached, the army still will not be in a position to guarantee that all requests will be served.

White said the requests for aid to transients has increased slightly, but the number of residents asking for help has jumped tremendously. A tally of types of requests show that so far this year, the number of people asking for materials and meals has more than doubled and according to White, "that is where the money is."

The Salvation Army is getting requests for aid from people who do not usually ask.

"Those just on the fringe," White said, "who always have been productive people and who have been making it before now are asking for help."

"We've had far more men, who are the wage earners, come in even if they still are making money, but are not able to pay all their bills. Some have never been in a welfare role. They don't qualify for government aid, but they need assistance."

Besides these people, more senior citizens also are asking for help, according to White.

To combat the problem of duplications, a Christmas coordinating committee was formed by the Salvation Army made up of many of the organizations in the West Valley involved in assistance during the December holiday season.

"The purpose of the Christmas coordinating committee is to eliminate as much duplication as possible," White said. "If we get together with these other groups, we can make an attempt to avoid this from happening. This system is better than having none at all."

Salvation Army organizations raise money in three ways — through appeals in the mail, kettles on the streets at Christmas and direct gifts from individuals.

The army was founded in England by Methodists under the premise that helping those in need of material goods also will help their moral outlook.

It now is a church of its own, a Protestant offshoot of the Church of Nazarene. Services are held at Salvation Army locations and members believe helping others is the Christian thing to do.

Crime and Christmas go hand in hand

By IAN FALLIS
Staff Writer

As sure as there's a St. Nick, there's a crook waiting to rip off shoppers and shopkeepers this holiday season.

And with the fervor of children hoping to catch a glimpse of the elusive St. Nick, police will be trying to catch those crooks.

All the weapons of modern police work, as well as a few old-fashioned tools, are being brought to bear on the problem of holiday crime this year.

One thing police didn't expect is working in their favor this year: crime rates in most communities are down so far, according to several officers.

Crimes — particularly shoplifting, armed robbery, forgery, and burglary — usually increase over the holidays, said Richard Van Der Wyk, crime prevention officer at the Rancho Cucamonga Sheriff's Substation. The reasons are not clear, but crime is contributed to by the temptation of money changing hands, crowds to cover shoplifting and gifts left in cars.

Poor economic conditions usually add to crime also. "History has shown that recessions have always brought more theft and more aggression," said Lt. Guy Eisenbrey of the Montclair Police Department. "I don't see how we can expect anything different at this point in time."

Police think the pleasant situation is partly a result of crime prevention programs. All the cities in the West Valley have neighborhood watch programs which have often been credited with a large reduction in the residential burglary rate.

In addition, some officers believe neighborhood watch helps cut commercial crime by giving people casing businesses or trying to get away fewer places to hide.

And the equivalent of neighborhood watch is being tried out for businesses. Montclair and Chino have recently started business alert programs in which officers tell meetings of businessmen what to watch out for and how they can cut crime.

With a specific aim at reducing holiday crime, Ontario and Rancho Cucamonga officers have given businessmen seminars containing much the same information.

And the Upland Police Department, through the chamber of commerce, has attempted to give every businessman in town a booklet on how to prevent holiday crime. Montclair has also distributed a pamphlet on holiday crime prevention.

Upland and Montclair have both designed their literature so business owners and managers can use them to train their employees in the same crime prevention techniques they have been taught.

All the departments emphasize about the same things.

A criminal can sometimes be recognized when he comes into a shop. He may look at the people in the shop more than the merchandise, or carry something people don't often bring into a shop, like a book or box.

Routine security precautions — like locking storerooms and display cases and installing an alarm system — are encouraged.

And shopkeepers and their employees are told what to look for to get a good description. The most important thing to look for, officers say, is something that distinguishes the criminal from the vast majority of the population, like a scar or a manner of speaking or walking.

Officers are also encouraging people not to leave packages visible in cars, since auto burglaries are a very common problem during the holidays.

And the safest way to go shopping is with a friend in the morning, they say.

But police don't expect crime to stay down, and are planning special patrols and watches this season.

All the local police departments and sheriff's substations will be making special efforts to share information about criminals, Van Der Wyk said.

"The theory is crime knows no bounds," he added.

Police RIDE holiday program exceeds expectations first week

By IAN FALLIS
Staff Writer

The number of arrests made by RIDE program officers exceeded expectations for the first week-end.

California Highway Patrol Officer Bob Metallo said that during last weekend, the first one for the program this year, 29 people were arrested on suspicion of drunken driving, 29 were cited for other offenses, 54 were given verbal warnings and one person was arrested on suspicion of being drunk in public.

RIDE stands for Regional Intoxicated Driver Enforcement. It is a joint effort of the CHP, the Ontario, Upland and Montclair police departments and the Rancho Cucamonga Sheriff's Substation to enforce drunken driving laws over the Christmas holiday season.

Last year was the program's first, and officers in three patrol cars arrested a little more than 100 people on suspicion of drunken driving.

Metallo added that the purpose of the RIDE program is not merely to arrest drunken drivers, but to discourage people from driving after they have been drinking and to make the roads safer for sober drivers.

Della Robbia wreath remains a tradition

A holiday tradition continues at Boys Republic in Chino: the Della Robbia wreath.

The wreath project, which began in 1924, is still a major fund source for the school-farm community for troubled boys.

The school will make 55,000 wreaths this year for shipment to 50 states and numerous foreign countries. One will be displayed at the White House in Washington, D.C. The last wreath will be shipped Wednesday.

Workers make the Christmas wreaths inside a warehouse at Boys Republic in an assembly-line setting.

Although warehouse activities increase the Friday after Thanksgiving, the Della Robbia is actually a year-round project. Students travel throughout the Southland to gather lotus pods, jacaranda, teasel, liquid amber, flowering eucalyptus and cedar that comprise the crown of the wreath.

The winesap apples come from Washington and lemons are donated by local growers.

The wreath circles are shipped from Occidental near the Russian River.

As the crown materials arrive, seven valley women begin putting together the crowns. They work six hours daily from mid-January. These prefabricated crowns are stored until November.

Amelia Hernandez, the matriarch of the Della Robbia office, begins work in July. It is her task to design the wreath each year.

Mrs. Hernandez came to Boys Republic in 1928, four years after the Della Robbia sales began.

"A lot of things have changed," she said. "It used to all be done in one room and by hand. Now everything's larger. The first year I was here they made 500 wreaths. I was paid 20 cents a crown and I only worked for about a week."

Mrs. Hernandez now works at least five months and is an hourly employee. She is regarded as the historian and matriarch of the wreath production by the staff, faculty and boys.

Carl Bush, general supervisor of the wreath production, said Mrs. Hernandez designs the holiday specialty art piece for trustees and patrons. Using her picture as a model, he and several boys weld the frames that create designs of snowmen, candles, reindeer. Each specialty utilizes the various parts of the wreath crowns, he said.

Via Ponce said her primary reason for returning for 54 years is, "I know I'm appreciated for the work I've done. I'm helping the boys. And it goes for a good cause. I enjoy what I'm doing."

"We have a lot of fun doing this," said Jody Marker, another wreath supervisor. "The boys spend about 30 Saturdays gathering the dry materials. The ladies work from January through the wreath season on the prefabs of dried pods and such. We average about 30 boys a day who drill and wire the pods as part of their work experience requirements at Boys Republic."

"Then the day after Thanksgiving, we go into full production. Two cottages are assigned to work the wreath office for each of the three weeks. That way, everyone in the six cottages has a chance to be here," Marker added.

Oscar Morrison, Boys Republic associate director, said the Della Robbia has become synonymous with Boys Republic. Calvin Coolidge was elected president of the United States the year before the wreath program began, he said.

A Della Robbia has been at the White House every year — from Coolidge's administration through President Reagan's.

The program has gained distinction throughout the United States and abroad.

Bank tells new branch office plans

Vineyard National Bank reports deposits of $8 million, assets at $10 million, with account holders over 4,000 on Dec. 1, according to Steven Sensenbach, president.

In September, application was made with the Controller of the Currency to open branches of Vineyard National Bank in Fontana and Chino. Approval was received to establish a branch in Fontana, June, 1983; in Chino, January, 1984.

"We are encouraged to proceed with our expansion program by the remarkable community support given to our first office in Rancho Cucamonga," said Sensenbach. "We're adding people and services to this headquarters office as rapidly as we can rearrange the facility to accommodate more desks," he added.

Members of Vineyard National Bank's Board of Directors are local businesspeople and professionals including Dr. Lester Stroh, Chairman; Frank S. Alvarez, S. "Buster" Filpi, Bert C. Francis, Catherine J. Barnes, Charles L. Keagle, Gilbert B. Rodriguez, Phillip D. Schlosser, Steven R. Sensenbach and Neil R. Zoller.

Richard M. Dineen has been appointed Business Development Officer for the bank.

Dineen has over 30 years experience in matters — financial with banks as well as finance and thrift and loan corporations.

"Dick is well qualified for his new post," said Sensenbach. "His expertise includes a unique ability for helping business people in all facets of banking. He's very adept at arranging loans, designing financial programs and assisting business people to take advantage of Vineyard National Banks computer service for businesses."

An enthusiastic, civic-minded person, Dineen is involved in the communities he serves — particularly the communities in West San Bernardino County and the Greater San Gabriel Valley where he has made his home for over 20 years.

John C. Street has been appointed Vice President/Cashier for the bank.

Street has more than 10 years banking experience in all facets of administrative and operational functions.

Christmas Concert set for Sunday

Pomona Valley's Christmas Concert will be held in Ganesha Park on Sunday at 2 p.m. The public is invited to attend at no charge, according to Nancy J. McCracken, president of the Friends of the Pomona Concert Band, who coordinated the event.

Music for the 90-minute concert will be provided by the Pomona Concert Band, under the direction of G. Stanton Selby, and the Pomona High School Madrigal Singers, directed by Raymond P. Woods. The program will feature traditional Christmas music, including many familiar carols arranged for audience sing-along participation.

Those attending may bring a new, unwrapped toy for a "Toys for Tots" collection at the concert.

Boys Republic receives grant

A $20,000 grant by the Ralph M. Parsons Foundation of Los Angeles to Boys Republic will be used to help continue funding of a new juvenile delinquency prevention program.

The grant is earmarked for the Monrovia Project, pioneered by Boys Republic with the Los Angeles County Probation Department.

The Monrovia Project treats juvenile problems on an "out-patient" basis.

Boys Republic, founded in 1907, is best known for its residential farm and campus in Chino. It also operates satellite residential youth programs in other Southland communities as well as the Monrovia program. More than 13,000 boys have been successfully aided at Boys Republic since its founding.

Members of the U.S. Marine Corps will be present to accept the toys.

The Pomona YMCA is providing a Christmas tree for the stage, which will be decorated with ornaments made by children at Lincoln Elementary School in Pomona. The tree will be delivered to a local family immediately following the concert, by members of the Pomona Valley Council of Churches.

Help needed at Montclair Library

The Montclair Branch Library is seeking volunteers to assist in the Audio-Visual Department. Jobs include typing, filing, booking, packing, shipping films and running film inspection equipment.

Training will be provided.

Interested individuals will be asked to provide at least six hours of service per week for a minimum of three months. Those interested may contact Harriet Foucher for interview appointments by calling 624-4671.

Pre-Christmas storytime is offered

A pre-Christmas Storytime for pre-schoolers will be offered on Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the Montclair Branch Library. The program will not only include stories like "Twelve Bells of Santa" and "Wake Up, Bear ... It's Christmas" but also finger games and songs to enhance the seasons feelings.

Christmas films will be offered everyday at 2 p.m. on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday. Some of the films that will be shown are "Christmas Cracker," "Little Drummer Boy" and the "Steadfast Tin Soldier."

Please call to register for the above programs at 624-4671 or tickets can be picked up at the library.

Pet therapy program initiated for seniors

A docile black cat brightened Mary Hill's day. The 97-year-old former librarian flashed a surprised smile as the animal settled contentedly on her lap.

Mildred Whyte scrutinized a black and white feline and exclaimed: "Why, it's a beautiful cat."

Mabel Brown first selected a white-faced brown puppy named "Satchmo" and later switched her preference to two tiny orange-beaked finches.

The selections were being made, not in a pet shop, but in the health care center at Pilgrim Place in Claremont. Three cats, two dogs and two birds had been transported to the center by officials of the Pomona Valley Humane Society which recently initiated a pet therapy program for retirement facilities.

And the residents responded with elation. "Never have I seen so many smiling faces," said Frances Strahan, activities director. "I can just see them bubbling. There is more talking and expressing (of ideas with one another)," she added. The program marked the first time some 30 residents of the center joined to "reach out and touch" animals. In the past, visitors have shared animals with residents on an individual basis, Mrs. Strahan explained.

For those who previously owned pets, the experience offered opportunity to reminisce. For others, many who are retired missionaries, it was a new experience, she added.

Mrs. Hill, who is blind and nearly deaf, beamed as the cat began purring. "It's buzzing," she said as she caressed the contented animal. And she attested to the good care the cat has received. "You don't have any bones sticking out," she announced.

With a smile that deepened creases in her 97-year-old countenance, Mrs. Hill revealed that she would like to adopt the cat. "But then I couldn't take care of it," she observed. She noted that "in the past couple of years I feel weary."

Mrs. Whyte, who admits to "pushing 90," said she would willingly share the "beautiful" feline with her friend, Eliza Starr. Bestowing affection on the quiet animal was a pleasurable experience, both women said.

For Mrs. Brown, the experience "brought back memories." Once upon a time, she said, her family had three dogs.

Omar Flugum noted the program provided "a momentary joy," while Grover Chapman summarized the value of "this nice live program." As he looked around the room at his peers, he observed "light in their faces. It brings them to the reality of life and brings back memories," he said.

Bill Harford, Humane Society director, said the idea to brighten lives of seniors with visits by animals was first conceived in 1973 by Phil Arkow, public relations director for the humane society in Colorado Springs, Colo.

During the past year, Harford and Lori Hallowell explored avenues for reaching out to different segments of the community.

The pet therapy program for seniors has merit, he said, because those in retirement facilities cannot keep pets. These people are a part of the community which is often ignored, he added.

Harford has memories of his own grandmother who moved into a nursing home and lost the companionship of a pet cat. "She slipped so quickly when she was taken out of her environment. She walked around calling the cat."

Harford said the idea of instituting the pet therapy program brewed "on the back burner" for some time. It was initiated recently when Lori Seachrist, the Humane Society's education coordinator, acquired additional time to visit various facilities on a regular basis.

Mrs. Seachrist, assisted by Jeannie Harnage, select animal that are sociable and lackadaisical and can provide pleasure for seniors.

In addition to Pilgrim Place, the Humane Society team visits several retirement facilities and convalescent hospitals.

HomeCare helps woman to recover from injury

Spending a winter in California hasn't been quite what an Ohio woman had in mind.

But thanks to a nursing and home aide program, she is recovering from a fracture and able to move about again.

Mrs. Waldo H. Shank Sr. of Toledo is recovering from a fractured leg bone at the home of her daughter and son-in-law, Betty and Dale Galbraith, in Upland.

She is receiving daily care and physical therapy from the staff at the Claremont Manor Home-Care program.

Claremont Manor Home-Care is among the valley home health agencies that observed National Home Health Care Week last week. Kim Franklin, a certified aide, assists Mrs. Shank daily from 7:15 a.m. to 3:15 p.m. while the Galbraiths are both at work.

Three times a week, a physical therapist from the HomeCare program comes to the home to supervise an exercise program.

During the days, Miss Franklin fixes breakfast, helps with personal care and supervises Mrs. Shank's daily exercises.

"I could walk even more in my walker than Kim lets me," grins Mrs. Shank. "But for a time, I was afraid I'd never get out of bed again."

"I am really grateful to be regaining my health as the holidays approach," said the Ohio woman. "Being an invalid is a new role for me. I've always been healthy and independent."

The accident to Mrs. Shank almost went unnoticed at the time, she reported.

Mrs. Shank stumbled slightly when she went down a rather steep step in Ohio. But she was more concerned about attending the wedding of a relative in Chicago, Ill. So the 88-year-old woman ignored the pain.

She has arthritis and limped slightly through the wedding festivities, Mrs. Shank recalled.

Mrs. Shank said the leg "simply rebelled" when she arrived in Upland. An examination revealed a broken bone. She was bedridden at first. Then a friend of her daughter mentioned HomeCare.

Marilyn Casket, Home-Care coordinator, explained the next step.

"While we accept calls directly from persons interested in the service, we also work with client's physicians."

"Mrs. Shank was under the care of a physician. Registered nurses first came to evaluate her needs. Then a physical therapy program was prescribed and supervised.

"Mrs. Shank now needs only the care of an aide plus occasional visits by the physical therapist."

Three times each day, Mrs. Shank goes through a series of exercises to strengthen the leg. She then takes 20 steps in the walker.

Miss Franklin has been assisting Mrs. Shank since October. She said most aides assist a family any length of time — from about a week to two months.

Mrs. Galbreath is a school teacher and Galbreath is a professor at Cal Poly Pomona. Both are gone during the day.

The concept of home care by agencies is to provide medical and homemaking service in the home so that ill or handicapped people need not be hospitalized or placed in a care facility, Mrs. Caskey explained.

Claremont Manor started the service some time ago, primarily to assist residents within the retirement community. The service was expanded into the valley when the demand became apparent, said Mrs. Caskey.

If a client is under a physician's supervision, nursing and physical therapy services are often covered by Medicare or insurance. Home aide services are usually not covered by insurance.

Ayala seeks interim water supply solution

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

Putting the Peripheral Canal on the back burner for now, Sen. Ruben Ayala is looking for some kind of interim solution to bringing Northern California water south.

Ayala, D-34th District, held a meeting in Sacramento on Dec. 6 with a variety of water interests. He also introduced two bills that day on the Peripheral Canal.

He said he still believes that the 43-mile canal around the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta is the ultimate answer and final link for the State Water Project and emphasized that he does not want a temporary solution to become a permanent one.

However, Ayala said he was encouraged to find that some ardent legislative opponents of the Peripheral Canal now seem willing to talk and find common ground for a solution to the water shortage foreseen in Southern California once Colorado River water is reduced with completion of the Central Arizona Central in 1985 or 1986.

Delta representatives are particularly concerned about shoring up the levies there to protect farmlands, he noted.

"They are willing to talk to us about a transfer facility in return for support," he said.

Proposals to widen and deepen the existing delta channels will run into opposition from environmentalists if the water is sent to Southern California, Ayala predicted.

But, he added, Southern California legislators will not support state assistance on the delta levies without getting water in return.

Ayala said one possibility may be to build the northern one-third of the Peripheral Canal. That would get the project started, although it would not eliminate pumping at the south end of the delta that creates reverse flows killing fish, he said.

He said both Assembly Speaker Willie Brown and Senate President Pro Tem David Roberti responded favorably to his idea to form a two-house special committee to deal with the water issues. The committee would have an equal number of senators and Assembly members, with the chairmanship rotating between himself and the chairman of the Assembly Committee on Water, Parks and Wildlife.

Ayala introduced SB 10 to specify that the Peripheral Canal be designated as the transfer facility of the State Water Project referred to in the 1960 Burns-Porter Act.

His SB 15 designates the state Water Resources Control Board as the governing body over water standards in the delta, San Francisco Bay and North Coast wild rivers.

On the state budget crisis, Ayala said he continues to support a combination of spending cuts and possible tax increases, as long as they have "sunset clauses" limiting their life.

Colleges seek earlier student aid information

Public and private colleges are pressing the government to provide information on student financial aid as soon as possible so students and their families have adequate time to make college decisions, according to the Pomona College vice president for special services.

R. Fred Zuker, dean of admissions and a member of the National Association of College Admissions Counselors, said colleges are attempting to increase their own grant and scholarship programs to compensate for reduced state and federal aid to students.

"But information on financial aid must be available from the government in a timely fashion so families and the schools have a basis upon which to make decisions," Zuker said.

"In addition, students must assume more responsibility in promptly notifying colleges where they have applied and been accepted if they decided to attend another institution," Zuker noted.

The dean said many students are now enrolling at several colleges and delaying their decisions about final selection until too late for the college to fill the spaces with students on the waiting list.

"This creates a financial hardship for the schools since all are operating with very tight budgets. Empty classes and vacant dormitory rooms result in a monetary loss for the schools," he explained.

"When we ask the student to make a $200 deposit to save a place in the class, we consider this a quasi-agreement. Yet some students are making deposits at several schools and just not appearing on registration day.

"A ripple effect then sets in. The first college admits a person on the waiting list who may have already registered at a school which was second choice. Then the second school is left with a vacancy. This can go down the line, impacting several colleges, he said.

"It's not a game, but a serious problem. Students should be able to decide on the school of their choice by April or May," he added.

To reduce this problem and explain the various financial aid programs available to prospective students, Pomona College is conducting a series of parent and student information forums in Southern California communities this month.

Pomona College is also expanding its student grant and financial aid programs by earmarking about $20 million of its current $80 million fundraising campaign for these programs.

Seventy percent of the students attending Pomona College receive help through government, college-based grants or outside financial aid. This aid includes ROTC, National Merit scholarships and programs supported by service clubs and organizations.

About 50 percent of these awards are based on financial need and merit. Others are based solely on merit.

Since Pomona College — like many others — admits students regardless of need if the academic qualifications are met, it means colleges must increase their aid programs in the face of reduced government subsidies, said Zuker.

"The federal government sees student aid as a way to save dollars," he added. "But cutting back on education at the same time that the government is supporting more sophisticated weapons could be catastrophic. We won't have anyone educated to operate those weapons. The Russians are not reducing their support of education."

Zuker said colleges are also trying to provide partial financial aid to students — called gap-ping. "We realize the student's financial need. But we can only provide part of the aid, which leaves a gap between what he needs and what we can offer," he explained. "However, we are also working closely with families to show them alternatives they can use to underwrite college expenses."

"Sometimes we have to assure families that the information they give us is confidential. Just because a family has an income of $50,000 doesn't mean it can write a check for $5,000 or more for tuition and lodging," he said.

In spite of inflation and reduced government funding for college students, Pomona College reports that applications are about the same in past years.
